

those under suspicion, and particularly trying to whitewash his own department.

Redfield's "Bad Taste."

"If the Eastland was a seaworthy boat, as he argued to us, then his inspection service is not worth a pinch of salt. To stand up there and argue that the Eastland was seaworthy and that his federal inspectors did their duty when the boat lay on its side at Clark street was not only bad taste on his part, in my opinion, but was actually insulting to me."

"I don't believe President Wilson understands what this man has been doing. To come out here while we were mourning over our dead and tell us that everything was all right, that no one was to blame, that his inspection service was above reproach, and that we were all mistaken in insisting that some one was criminally guilty—to make such a show as that after the president had ordered a thorough inquiry was enough to make us all lose our calmness and become fighting mad."

"I am in favor, if it could be done, of recalling the coroner's jury and making a special report on this man Redfield to be sent to President Wilson. He has outraged every sense of decency since his arrival in Chicago. He ought to be recalled now. The sooner the president gets him away from Chicago the better it will be for the administration and the safety of our people's lives in the future."

Attorney Protests to President.

In a letter to President Wilson, Attorney Charles A. Churnan said: "I submit that Mr. Redfield has forfeited his usefulness to the government, at least as far as this investigation is concerned, and some fair, serious-minded, responsible person should take his place. In the incident articles I have marked the particular passages which seem to me so out of place as to seem irrational; so heartless as almost to amount to brutality; so leading and suggestive to the witnesses being examined as to amount to the judgment of a 'packed jury' that my blood boils with indignation."

The board of directors of the Woman's City club, of which Mary E. McDowell is president, adopted resolutions protesting against the Redfield investigation and requesting the president to appoint two United States naval engineers and two private naval engineers, Chicago citizens, to constitute a board of inquiry in which "the public might have confidence."

Korshak Bitter Against Redfield.

And Assistant Corporation Counsel Max M. Korshak had this to say:

"One is surprised at the boldness of the attempt so soon after the death of 1,200 innocent men, women, and children to give a clean bill of health to persons responsible for the disaster."

The anxiety of Secretary of Commerce Redfield to whitewash the federal officials is one of the best indications that these officials are responsible. If they were not responsible they would not fear the searchlight of truth. Men who are innocent welcome investigation.

"The citizens of Chicago protest emphatically and resent the investigation of the latest importation from Washington who arrived with a bucket of whitewash and a brush to whitewash government officials who publicly certified that the Eastland was a safe boat."

People Previous, Says Redfield.

Mr. Korshak's statement was shown to Secretary Redfield. "I am uninterested," he said. "People are so previous." During the day Secretary Redfield, who maintained an aggressive attitude, turned over the bulk of the questioning to Solicitor Thurman. Great freedom also was allowed outsiders to make interjections. In the absence of Barratt O'Hara, a member of the advisory board, Thomas O'Hara, his father, took his place. James O'Hara, a brother of Thomas and an uncle of the lieutenant governor, has been retained as attorney for Capt. Harry Pedersen.

RAISES BOAT'S CAPACITY ON STATEMENT BY HULL

Questions directed to Robert Reid, the Grand Haven inspector, developed the fact that he increased the capacity of the Eastland as the result of a telephone message from William H. Hull, vice president and general manager of the St. Joseph Chicago Steamship company. This was on July 2 of this year. On June 7 Reid certified 2,338 passengers, stipulating that he would increase the number to 2,500 if additional life rafts were provided. Reid testified Mr. Hull told him that the equipment was provided and accordingly he issued the new certificate. It was not until the next day that he received an affidavit from Capt. Harry Pedersen stating that the legal number of life rafts were on the boat. It was not until July 4 that Reid and Eckhart actually inspected the boat to determine whether the apparatus was sufficient to justify certifying 2,500 passengers.

Reid Nervous on Stand.

In testifying Reid was noticeably nervous, his answers at times becoming almost inaudible. "Isn't it rather unusual," asked Congressman Sabath, "to issue a new certificate before a written application is received?" Reid testified: "I had the greatest confidence in Mr. Hull," he said finally. "As I stated, it was issued on the telephone application of Mr. Hull."

"You had known him very well?"

"I had known him casually about two years."

"But what was the necessity for this haste? Was there any particular urgency about the matter?"

Covers Big Territory, He Says.

Again Reid hesitated. Then he mentioned the extent of his territory—Benton Harbor, South Haven, Grand Haven, Kalamazoo, Ludington, Menasha, Sheboygan, and other ports. "We can't remain in the office all the time," he continued. "We've got to be out there. We're practically on the line all the time. I don't remember Mr. Hull giving any special reason, though."

"Did any complaints reach you about the Eastland last year or this year?"

"No, sir," replied the witness.

Assistant State Attorney Michael F. Sullivan took up the examination.

President's Secretary Writes Inquiry Will Be Thorough.

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

AVON, NEW JERSEY

July 28, 1915.

Dear Sir:

The President directs me to acknowledge the receipt of your telegram with reference to the Eastland tragedy, and to say that he fully appreciates the importance of the whole incident, and will see to it that the investigation is thorough enough to satisfy everybody. He wishes me also to say that he has already seen to this, and that nothing will be omitted to bring forth all of the facts, and to fix the responsibility.

Sincerely yours,

Secretary to the President.

To the Editor,
Chicago Tribune,
Chicago, Illinois.

"Did you ever recommend anybody for a position on the Eastland?"

"I never did," replied Reid.

"Did you ever recommend anybody for a position with any company?"

"I never did—I would like to qualify that a little. The officials of a steamship company asked us to recommend a man for captain, and we recommended a Capt. Doyle who was then looking for a place."

Never Boosted Any Concern's Oil.

"Did you ever recommend the purchase of oil from any particular concern?"

"Not to my knowledge."

"You would recall it if you had done it, wouldn't you?"

"Unless my memory is defective. I'll do the best I can for you, sir."

Mr. Sullivan asked whether Reid had ever heard his son-in-law, J. M. Erickson, chief engineer of the Eastland, complain about overwork or the boat having defective machinery. The witness replied in the negative.

Redfield Breaks His Silence.

Secretary Redfield then asked a few questions. It was one of the few occasions when he broke his silence. The purpose of this examination, brief and unlike the cabinet member's manner of the day previous, may be inferred from the final question.

"Then I am correct in assuming," the secretary said, "that you visited the Eastland four times: First, May 6 to 8; second, May 24; third, May 30, and fourth, July 4?"

"I believe you are correct," agreed Reid.

Mr. O'Hara, once a dock hand with Reid, later a shipmate with Inspector Frank W. Van Patten, and subsequently a judge, answered the inquiry had not made much headway so far, and solemnly invoked Reid to tell the whole truth.

It was clear, he added, the "mishap" was not caused by an "act of God," but by "incompetency or misconduct."

Method of License Issue Trivial.

"I attach no importance," he continued, "to the trivial incident of issuing the license before the application was received. I would probably do it myself."

"We'll put you on the stand and let you testify," interrupted Mr. Sabath.

Secretary Redfield raised his hand in protest.

"You know we gave you your chance, Mr. Congressman," he said with a suggestion of paternalism.

"I can take care of myself," flashed O'Hara. "I'd make as good a witness as you—yes, and just as good a congressman."

"I don't doubt that; I realize it," was Sabath's reply.

"You'll agree," continued O'Hara with great earnestness, "that it is the duty of the inspector to go into the construction of a boat?"

"As far as possible," admitted Reid.

"Now, Capt. Reid, honor bright, would you issue a license for the Eastland again?"

"Yes, I would," was the answer after a moment's consideration.

"But you wouldn't do it without making a study of the water ballast, of course?"

"I would study the water ballast, of course."

Will Watch Ballast, Hereafter.

The witness agreed to make this part of his duty in the future. O'Hara attempted his duty to inspect boats with a view to the depth of the harbors in which they are ordinarily left at the same port for years.

SULLIVAN AND THURMAN IN HEATED ARGUMENT.

At the morning session Mr. Sullivan became involved in a heated argument with Mr. Thurman over questions he asked Inspector Reid.

"You don't ask fair questions," Mr. Thurman told Mr. Sullivan. "What you ask about the right of appeal from a local inspector to the supervising inspector is all in United States statutes. This man is not a lawyer."

"If this man, who had thousands of lives under his care, is not familiar with the common practice of the inspection bureau we want to know it," Mr. Sullivan rejoined.

The witness then stated that his supervising inspector would have the power to overrule him.

"How many times has that been done?" asked Mr. Sullivan.

"Now, give him a chance," interrupted Mr. Thurman.

"Well Protected," Sullivan Charges.

"O, he's well protected," said the assistant state attorney. "In how many instances have there been appeals from your decision as an inspector?" asked Mr. Sullivan turning to the witness.

"About four, I think."

"What was the result of those appeals, I want to know," said Solicitor Thurman.

"We were overruled in one case, the decision in another is in abeyance, and we were sustained in two instances."

"Why did Mrs. Erickson want her husband on the Eastland?"

"So that he could live in St. Joe, where she went to live."

Col. Judson Tells of Soundings.

Lieut. Col. William V. Judson of the local government engineering corps was called to identify a drawing which had been made under his direction showing the depth of the Chicago river about the sunken Eastland.

The smallest depth recorded on the chart was 10.7 feet. At fifteen feet from the dock about the center of the docked Eastland—the depth was 11.2 feet.

"Do you think the boat could have grounded?" asked Congressman A. J. Sabath.

"I think it unlikely," Col. Judson answered.

"What is the depth of the water at the stern?" asked O'Hara.

"Twenty-three feet and four-tenths."

Col. Judson stated that the Eastland is now forty feet from the dock and fifteen feet forward. He said he did not know whether the propeller blade of the Eastland extended below the ship's hull.

Mr. Redfield ordered him to consult the plans of the boat and report to the inquiry.

ONLY ONE UNIDENTIFIED AMONG BODIES RECOVERED.

No. 571 Is Only Unknown at Eastland Morgue as Workmen Try to Right the Death Steamer.

One body only, No. 571, still remains unidentified in the Eastland morgue at 912 West Madison street. A body taken from the river yesterday morning was identified positively during the day as Mrs. Agnes Daley of 1849 West Superior street.

Identification was made by the brother, George Behrendt, her father-in-law, Bartholomew Daley of 1435 West Fourteenth place, and a friend, Miss Eselle Foley. The young woman's mother refused to look at the body, saying she could not bear to do so, but she identified the clothing. The body of the dead woman's husband, John Daley, was recovered and identified Thursday. The two had been married less than a year.

The mortality statistics when rescuers quit yesterday afternoon stood:

Known number of dead, 238

Identified bodies, 235

Unidentified, 1

Reported missing, 517

Righting of the Eastland progressed slowly before the committee on harbor, wharves, and bridges, will try to force a statutory bill of all lake vessels carrying passengers in or out of the Chicago harbor.

Col. H. A. Allen, marine engineer, appeared before the committee yesterday and denounced the federal inspection.

The committee discussed selecting Rear Admiral David Watson Taylor, chief of the bureau of construction of the navy department and one time president of the society of mine architects and naval engineers, to make examinations. The committee was informed, however, that the services of Rear Admiral Taylor could not be obtained at this time.

He Went the Limit.

He took charge of the funeral and turned in a bill for $234. The widow was dumfounded. There were twenty-one items; charges of $10 for a clergyman, $10 for a sexton, $10 for a minister, and $10 for flowers.

Following THE TRIBUNE's expose of overcharge, Mayor Thompson went to the Greco home. He found the widow prostrate and destitute with two babies to care for. He asked for Reda's bill and was astounded.

Summoned by Mayor.

The embalmer was summoned to the city hall to show cause why his license should not be revoked at once. The mayor was out and Charles Fitzmorris, his secretary, instructed Reda to return today and bring with him a statement explaining each item in the bill. Itemized it is as follows:

Will Start Cyclone.

In relation to the disaster itself, Mayor Thompson said he did not want to criticize the federal inquiry at this time, but would start a cyclone for some one if blame is not fixed for the disaster.

BOAT DESIGNER WILL GO BEFORE U. S. JURY TODAY

He Is Expected to Tell of Safety Precautions and Speed of Craft.

A score of witnesses testified before the federal grand jury yesterday regarding their knowledge of the circumstances surrounding the capsizing of the Eastland in the river a week ago this morning. Many more will go before the jury this morning, including Designer S. G. Jenkins of Port Huron, Mich., and other men from distant points.

The activity of District Attorney Charles P. Cline and his assistants indicates that the federal inquiry will be a thorough one.

Mr. Cline announced that every phase of the great disaster, the history of the boat, and its reported previous "cranky" performances, the knowledge owners of the ship had of this, and the methods of the steamboat inspection service will be gone into independently of any other investigation.

U. S. Case Is Aided.

Judge Landis strengthened the government's hand during the day by ordering the hulk of the Eastland seized by the United States marshal. This was done to give the government complete jurisdiction over the boat and to prevent state and local authorities from tampering with it or removing such parts as may become important evidence in the prosecution of the grand jury inquiry.

United States Marshal John J. Bradley immediately took charge of the boat. He visited the boat and caused notices of the seizure to be posted in conspicuous places. The government also made soundings of the river and began an examination of the boat. Under orders from the United States marshal, workmen began sealing up all openings. When this is completed work will be started to pump the ship dry.

Hull Not a Witness.

All these matters will be reported to the grand jury. The government's seizure of the boat, Mr. Cline said, will not prevent state or municipal authorities from going on the boat on lawful business of investigation, but no one will be permitted to remove anything or tamper with the ship's mechanism. The government will endeavor to preserve everything intact as it is, and the morning the boat is hauled and topped over with its human freight. There will be no interference with the work of recovering bodies.

William H. Hull, vice president and general manager, and Walter C. Steele, secretary-treasurer of the St. Joe-Chicago line, owners of the vessel, appeared in the federal building during the day with their attorneys, Charles E. Kremer and James J. Barbour. They were not called before the inquest, but they will be the probabilities as they will be.

CITY TO HIRE EXPERT TO TEST ALL LAKE BOATS.

Council Subcommittee Tries to Engage Rear Admiral Taylor, but Is Not Successful.

Regardless of the jurisdiction of the federal government over the Chicago river, the city committee on harbor, wharves, and bridges, will try to force a statutory bill of all lake vessels carrying passengers in or out of the Chicago harbor.

Col. H. A. Allen, marine engineer, appeared before the committee yesterday and denounced the federal inspection.

Sells Tickets for Eastland Benefit.

This morning at 10:30 o'clock the film drama, "The Birth of a Nation," will be shown to the hundreds of persons who have bought tickets to help swell THE TRIBUNE's Eastland relief fund.

Pretty girls from the Heisen Follies invaded the "pit" of the board of trade yesterday and sold the traders more than $50 worth of tickets. The Elmhurst Garden Ballet sold a like amount at the garden. Miss Dixie Baldwin made the largest individual sale of the day—exceeding $25.

Flowers will be sold at the performance. Anabelle Whitford will have charge of the flower girls—Veronica McNeil, Dorothy Collins, Gertrude Jacobs, Marie Astor, Gertrude Aszema, Elsie Lowenstein, and Helen Utter.

Brilliant Pavlova Audience.

Approximately one-fourth the amount for the day came from the Midway Gardens, where Mile. Anna Pavlova and her company tendered their services at a special performance.

In the very center of the audience sat Mrs. Potter Palmer and her party, which included Mrs. Frederick Dent Grant, H. H. Monroe, and Carter H. Harrison. Many other notables were to be seen here and there in the crowd, which was a brilliant mass of orange, green, lavender, and the other riotous colors of the moment. Nor was this the only contribution to THE TRIBUNE fund from artists at the Midway Gardens, for Max Bendix and members of his National Symphony orchestra sent a substantial sum, which was acknowledged yesterday.

Reda Runs an Establishment at 1000 Polk street.

One of the bodies turned over to him was that of Leonardo Greco by the widow, Catherine Greco of 1020 Polk street.

He Went the Limit.

FRENCH AIRMEN IN SQUADRONS RAID FOE'S LINES

Drop Numerous Bombs on German Bases and Return Safely, Paris Reports.

PARIS, July 30.—A campaign on German points by aeroplanes has been successfully launched by the French army, according to an official statement given out tonight. Various raids by squadrons of aircraft have resulted in damage behind the enemy's lines. The official report follows:

"On the 29th instant our aeroplanes bombarded the Ypres-Roulers railroad near Paschendaele; the camps of the Germans in the region of Longueval, to the west of Combaix; the German lines on the Brimont hill near Reims; the military station at Chatel, in the Argonne; and the station of Burthecourt, in Lorraine."

"During the night of the 29th-30th, one of our aviators bombed at Dornach (Alsace) a factory producing asphyxiating gas. Today an aerial squadron, including ten aeroplanes from the Paris front, dropped forty-four bombs on the station at Chauny (department of Aisne)."

Bald by Forty-five Airships.

"A squadron of forty-five aeroplanes set out this morning, having as its objective the petrol works of Pechelbrunn, between Haguenau and Wissembourg (Alsace). A cloudy sky and many mist bank permitted only part of the squadron to reach the goal."

"One hundred and three bombs were dropped on the Pechelbrunn works. In addition six bombs were dropped on the station at Detwiller, near Phalsbourg, and six on the aviation sheds at Phalsbourg. Every aeroplane came back safely."

A German aviator, yesterday threw down on the town of Nancy four bombs, but no casualties or damage resulted. "Only artillery engagements marked the clashes between the field armies."

German War Report.

BERLIN, July 30.—The German army headquarters staff today issued the following official statement regarding operations on the western front:

"Near Perthes in the Champagne region both sides exploded mines. Ours destroyed a French flanking trench northwest of Perthes."

"In the Forest of Le Preire a French attack collapsed before our infantry and artillery fire when in front of our trenches."

Hand to Hand Fighting.

"In the Vosges yesterday afternoon the enemy again attacked our line of Longueval and Barrenkopf. Hand to hand fighting for possession of this position has not yet come to a conclusion. Two English airmen were killed and one captured."

ALLIES' LOSSES HEAVY IN TURKEY, OFFICERS ASSERT.

Men of American Cruiser Horrified by Slaughter of Australian and Irish Forces, Is Report.

BERLIN, July 30.—A dispatch from Athens, Greece, to the Overseas News Agency says:

"The American cruiser North Carolina shortly returned to Greece from an extended trip in the war zone. The officers of the ship took an acquaintance that the real losses of the entente allies in the Dardanelles surpassed everything heretofore reported. The Australian and Irish detachments were almost annihilated."

"The attempts to storm the rocky, steep heights on the Asiatic side of the straits were termed by these officers as insanity. Turkish machine guns directed by German officers, moved down the storming ranks. The Turks, led by the Germans, fought with great fury."

"Wounded English officers at Alexandria spoke with the highest admiration of their antagonists. One Australian regiment of 1,000 men returned from a charge sixty-seven strong. These were wounded. Their comrades were dead."

ROSEBERG'S HEIR WOUNDED.

Officially Announced in London That Lord Dalmeny Is War Victim in France.

LONDON, July 30.—It was officially announced today that Lord Dalmeny, son and heir of Lord Roseberg, was wounded in France.

HERE'S THE STARRIEST BENEFIT OF ALL.

PRACTICALLY every theatrical star in Chicago at the present time will join hands in one big entertainment Wednesday night at the Green Mill gardens for this Tribune fund for Eastland sufferers. It will be distinctly out of the ordinary, for each individual actor and actress has promised to offer something really "new" and make the affair a huge success.

First of all, Joseph Santley and Ruth Randall will appear in some dance innovations and songs, and Vail Vail has given her word she will do something entirely different. Practically all of the "Maid in America" company have volunteered their services.

Roy Atwell is another of the many who has been asked and has consented to give his services. Also, it is planned now to have some of the leading film favorites appear in person and give a short talk on the thrills of working before the camera. At the present time there is every reason to believe Pavlova will be one of the attractions in her marvelous dances.

Last of all, but not the least on the program, will come Patricia. It won't be any old songs she will give, but some that have never yet been heard in public. In fact, the artist is conserving them for this event. Her appearance will top a finely balanced array of talent.

As an additional means of obtaining money, pretty chorus girls in striking costumes will sell programs and souvenirs from stage stars between different acts and before the performance. Candy and flowers will be raffled to the highest bidders and favors auctioned off.

The entire affair is under the direction of the North Shore Good Fellows and they will have the assistance of young women from the district. Tickets for the entertainment will be distributed to all members of the theatrical companies and prizes will be offered for the one making the largest number of sales.

MISS ISABELLA PATRICOLA

It's to be the biggest entertainment of its kind in the city and remember all of the proceeds will go to THE TRIBUNE fund.

SAVING ARMIES CHIEF PROBLEM FOR RUSSIA NOW

slav authorities announced in the newspapers that the city's official evacuation would begin on the following Sunday. As a matter of fact it began immediately. Police visited every house and told the "strosch," or porter, to try to induce the inhabitants in his building to leave at once for Russia (as distinguished from Poland). Free transportation on the railway to any destination in Russia and grants of money were promised when needed.

Rolling stock, consisting mainly of empty freight cars, was quietly accumulated on the sidings for a week until thousands of cars were available. During Friday, Saturday, and Sunday trains of refugees were dispatched eastward, the cars being occupied by fleeing men, women, and children as closely packed as possible.

Whole Countryside Deserted.

While 350,000 citizens, including nearly half of Warsaw's Ghetto, thus departed eastward, nearly another 350,000 of peasants came trooping into the Polish metropolis from the neighboring districts. Practically the entire population of the country on the north, south, and west came in a ceaseless procession day and night, the tired, dust-whitened peasant families with their cattle and portable goods thronging the roads converging on Warsaw. In the city itself literally tens of thousands of homes were broken up instantly.

Simultaneously with the evacuation all property likely to be useful to the enemy, especially metal and machinery, was removed or destroyed. Factories were feverishly stripped and the owners of the plants were granted free transport to the eastward for what they could save. Day and night one heard the periodical roar of a dynamited factory plant that was imbedded in concrete or was too cumbersome to be hauled away. Every fragment of this dynamited metal was taken eastward on the railway.

Everything of Value Removed.

Warsaw knew no stoppage of work in that week end. The huge postoffice, the banks, the telegraph offices, the law courts, and the various municipal departments were busy dismantling their quarters and packing their archives and portable equipment for immediate transport to Russia proper.

Day and night gangs of soldiers were busily stripping league after league of copper telegraph wires from the poles. The telephone exchange was dismantled. The dynamo supplying power to the street cars were removed, as were all wheels and detachable fittings of the cars, to be taken to Russia. All the crops around Warsaw were destroyed when no troops could be spared to garner them. Villages are being razed to the ground and the city's suburbs are being surrounded with trenches.

The three Vistula bridges, including the new bridge, more than a mile long and costing $4,000,000, are lined with sandbags and wires are set in readiness to explode land mines at the last moment before the Germans enter Warsaw.

Towns to East Evacuated.

Warsaw is now without postal service and only two or three military field telephones and telegraph wires connect it with Russia. Only by means of a permit, which is difficult to obtain, can one approach the doomed city. Beyond Brest Litovsk no civilian is allowed to journey.

The evacuation of the towns between Warsaw and Brest Litovsk is beginning and hardly 200,000 persons remain. Food costs ten times more than it did last month. There is no public water supply.

Battle Front Around Warsaw.

BATTLE LINE ABOUT WARSAW - JULY 30th

The machinery operating the pumps having been transported to Russia, and a typhoid epidemic is expected. More than 3,000 wounded soldiers remain in the hospitals.

Since Wednesday, July 21, every wheeled vehicle has been taken across the Vistula, with nearly all the horses. Two thousand hackney carriages are being driven by their owners across Russia for a distance of nearly 1,000 miles to Moscow. A number of the city's British fire engines were also sent away.

Police Ready to Depart.

The police are about to leave Warsaw, having rapidly trained a large body of civilian Poles to perform their duties. They place in each station house thirty rifles for mounted patrolmen. Mail bound for Warsaw are being opened in Petrograd and returned to the senders.

A week ago today a train arrived in Moscow carrying the British, French, Belgian, and Serbian consuls and consular archives. The American consul, Hernando de Soto, remained in Warsaw, having laid in a big stock of provisions with the intention of sticking to his post. On the train were also the British Anglican chaplain and the last remnant of the British colony, some riding on cattle trucks. The refugees included most of the high officials of the law courts with their archives and 30,000,000 rubles ($15,000,000) of court funds.

BRITAIN WILL DELIVER NEW NOTE IN FEW DAYS.

Entire Argument May Be Covered in It and Previous Communication Withdrawn.

Washington, D. C., July 30.—The supplemental British note regarding the rights of neutral sea and within blockade lines will be delivered to the embassy at London within a day or two, Ambassador Page advised the state department today, and probably will be released for publication early next week.

Whether the original note received here last Monday and withheld from the press at the request of the British foreign office will be allowed to stand in its present form, and also be made public, has not been disclosed. It is thought possible the entire British argument will be covered in the new note and the previous communication withdrawn.

Meanwhile, much data has been gathered by the state department upon which to base a rejoinder, which probably will be ready for President Wilson's consideration before he returns to Washington next week.

DEMOCRATS FEAR SPLIT IN PARTY OVER DEFENSES

Leaders Framing Policy to Bring Little and Big Army and Navy Men Together.

(BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.)

Washington, D. C., July 30.—Special.—Democratic leaders in congress are looking about for some means of preventing a party split over the question of national defenses next December.

The Democratic members of the ways and means committee will meet in Washington early in November in an attempt to arrange a program of action which will be at once satisfactory to the little army and the little navy Democrats from the south and to those Democrats principally from the Atlantic seaboard who favor a more adequate preparation for war.

The difficulty of this task is recognized by the members of the ways and means committee. Unless they perform it nicely they admit that there is a strong probability of a fusion of Republicans and a sufficient number of Democrats to take the control of the house and naval and military affairs committees away from the Democratic party and even the control of the house itself, if the country demands it.

Democratic Rule Weakened.

The election last year so reduced the Democratic membership on both the naval and military affairs committees that those bodies will have to be made almost wholly alien when congress convenes in December.

In majority of the Democrats remaining on the military affairs committee probably will follow the leadership of Chairman Hay in opposition to any material increase in the army. There is a strong probability that the ways and means committee, however, may see fit in its recommendations to increase some of these "little army" men to other committees of equal importance in rank, though not so vitally connected with the welfare of the party.

Illinois had one Democrat and one Republican on the military committee in the last congress. The Democrats O'Hair was beaten. The Republican McKenzie was re-elected. It is not probable that another Illinois Democrat will be given a place on the committee in the new congress, as there is none who would give up his present position for it.

Illinois has two holdover Democrats on the naval affairs committee and one holdover Republican. Congressman Buchanan of Chicago, one of the Democrats, is opposed to naval increases. The other Democrat in Congress is at-Large Williams, who is said to favor an increase.

Will Seek Wilson's Advice.

The ways and means committee does not expect to make its selection for either the military or naval affairs committee until it hears the wishes of President Wilson, Secretary of War Garrison, and Secretary of the Navy Daniels.

Although the president is now advocating an increase in the defenses, there is still considerable skepticism regarding his desire for a really adequate national defense.

It is generally believed he will attempt to satisfy the demands of the country and at the same time will try to avoid any action which will offend "little army and little navy" Democrats from the south.

"Our Country! In her intercourse with foreign nations may she always be in the right; but our country, right or wrong."
—Stephen Decatur.

WHY NOT?

Two Americans killed in Haiti. Why not? In Mexico an American is cheaper than a clay pigeon.
What must we expect but lack of respect for American rights of life or liberty in any Latin-American country or in any other country that has watched
our policy of excessive restraint and short sighted complacency in Mexico?

It is well enough to respect the rights of others,
but that has not been deemed inconsistent with respect for our own, until this sorry Mexican experiment. The price of its unwisdom will be paid by many an innocent man for many a year. It has paid us nothing but the contempt of Latin America, the contempt and suspicion of a people not given to sentimental humanitarianism or intemperate altruism—
as we ourselves are not when we are normal.

Every man who knows the Latin American, every man who thinks of normal humanity, has disapproved our failure to enforce a decent respect for the lives and rights of our people in Mexico. We are a byword now, hated profoundly and defied. But the time must come when we shall have to compel just consideration of our nationals and our nation, and then at last it will be realized that our policy of passivism has been kind neither to ourselves nor to the people we have encouraged to hold us in contempt.

GET BEHIND BUSINESS.

Former Senator Burton of Ohio, one of the strongest men in the Republican party today, is in agreement with economists and students of conditions in the prediction that after the war the country will have to face the keenest competition it has ever known, and he believes, with Tim Tri-xure, that this necessitates a thorough revision of our present tariff, not on Democratic lines of revenue but on Republican lines of protection.

Here is presented one of the great issues around which the battle of 1916 will and should be fought,
and Republicans and Progressives will find in it
one of the chief forces to bring them together in a party united upon the great traditional principles of Republicanism which the split of 1912 did not turn upon or affect.

The business of the United States will face a great commercial war when this war is over. It will face business backed by governments exerting every effort to assist. There is but one policy to meet such rivalry. American business should go forth to war with support as wise and thorough and unwavering as that of any people. Get behind American business and American business will win.

WANTED—A LEADER.

As the time for nominating candidates for the presidency draws nearer it becomes increasingly clear that the people are looking for a leader.
There are many aggressive factional leaders who wish to benefit their faction at the expense of the rest of the country.

There are a number of well known men trying to trim their conduct to suit the preponderance of the factions and thus sail into office.
The times show that nations must be united or fall.

During the months to come the American mind
will look more and more toward unity.

Irresistible support will gather behind the man who identifies himself with the movement for national defense, national thought, and the management of foreign as well as domestic affairs with the single purpose of the national welfare.

WOMEN AND WAR.

Pacifists have been making much of the sufferings of women through war and this phase of the great problem unquestionably should be given more definite consideration than it has had in the past. In counting the cost of a resort to arms, the cost to half the nation never should be ignored, and as women are enfranchised their interest and aims, in so far as they may be separated from those of men, are sure to weigh in the balance of national decision and help to formulate policy.

Woman's relation to war is in fact so important a fact that it is not necessary to overemphasize it or sentimentalize and distort it. Yet that is what is being done today. One would infer from the talk of extremist pacifists that war is the product of a deliberate selfish cruelty of the male, a man's game
indulged in for his pleasure wantonly, without consideration of any of worth to woman. The popular song "I didn't raise my boy to be a soldier"
is a crude expression of this ignorant and unthinking attitude.

This, of course, is obnoxious to women who are not fuddled by excessive pacifism and who realize that their sex if it has suffered has also shared whatever profit, moral and material, may be set off against the price of war, and who do not grudge the noble part women have had in the maintenance of national security, national aspirations, and ideals. The women who went through the civil war, though they endured the agony of loss, did not while about the price they paid, and neither would
the women of our day, unless we have fallen low, refuse the price war exacts of people who will
rather than submit to oppression or yield high principle in exchange for material peace.

It is encouraging to find that American women are meeting against the pacifist attempt to commit
them against national defense and to separate them
from those tragic tests of patriotic service which the men and women of the past have passed through as through purifying flames.

The Navy league has, for example, a woman's section with which many leading women have identified themselves and whose pledge is one which no woman
devoted to honorable peace will hesitate to take:
"I pledge myself to think, talk, and work for patriotism, Americanism, and sufficient national defense to keep the horrors of war far from America's homes and shores forever."

"In these days of world strife and peril I will strive to do my share to awaken our nation and our lawmakers to the dangers of our present undefended
condition, so that we may continue to dwell in peace
and prosperity and not have to mourn states deolated by war within our own borders."

"In so far as I am able I will make my home a center of American ideals and patriotism and endeavor to teach the children in my care to cherish
and revere our Country and its history and to uphold its honor and fair repute in their generation."

SECRETARY REDFIELD'S INVESTIGATION.

Secretary Redfield of the department of commerce will soon become a tax on the patience.
At an inquiry which this city considers important
he presents the small wit of an attorney for the defense entertaining a jury. His manner and his manners are matters for his own choice, but when they reveal or illustrate a process of thought Chicago has to protest.

Mr. Redfield asks for a suspension of public opinion until the purpose of his inquiry into the sinking of the Eastland has been disclosed and its results determined. He ought to make it possible for the public to suspend judgment.

There is no disposition here to cheer on a man hunt. It is one of the most disagreeable things a community has to do. The whole American record is one of leniency. Many citizens find in this leniency a cause, principal or contributing,
of the disasters which we have more than any other people excepting the Chinese.

We do not like to bring full responsibility home
to some erring human whose mistake has had awful consequences. There is an instinctive feeling that his sufferings must be dreadful without adding the hand of the community to them. This is the instinct of kindly people and, unless it be proved that the victims of accident were exposed to greed or to venality, there is likely to be more than adequate consideration for the responsible human agents.

The spirit of the man hunt is not in Chicago
now. The city does not want to inflict vindictive punishment upon any one. It does want justice done and, more than that, it wants guarantees. It wants better assurances that the careful precautions are being taken.

When the city in this reasonable and just mood
finds that the head of the department which controls the supervision of lake steamship service is developing, even with jocularity and inept sarcasms, merely the fact that law is sufficient and regulation adequate, it is bound to think of the contradictory fact of the Eastland and feel that its sorrow and its right to justice are both imposed upon.

If it were merely Mr. Redfield's manner that was unfortunate we might ascribe it to a temperamental failing which would be more kindly not mentioned, but when that manner seems only to reveal a purpose we cannot permit Mr. Redfield to be exempt from the criticism he invites.

He has presided at the sessions of the investigating body of which he is the head as an attorney for the defense. His questions have anticipated and given at length the answers they were designed to draw out. He has left nothing to the witness but an affirmation of his inquiry. He has not inquired. He has stated. The witness has been his echo. His sarcasms have been jovial but wanton.
When one has read a few thousand words of question and testimony one concludes that the disaster of Saturday was a grotesque dream. The Eastland did not sink. It is not now on its side in the river. It is out in the lake, perfectly seaworthy, loaded to its capacity with passengers, protected
by the best of all laws and the most scrupulous of all inspectors.

Mr. Redfield's apparent assumption is that the mass of interested people here is a mass ignorant of the first principles of ship construction and navigation. That is true. But it is to be left to people admittedly ignorant in the matter to be the only ones to comprehend that something must be wrong when a ship can roll over at its dock?
To mention only one instance in which ignorance seems wiser than wisdom: Mr. Redfield designed a series of questions to establish the fact that freight carriers were constructed without keels.
The ignorance which he sought cleverly to rebuke
would like to inquire what possible comparison could be made between a freight carrier, which has its cargo disposed and stationary, and an excusion boat with the most fluid cargo that could be carried, one which will run everywhere and can be little controlled—between a boat which can put its cargo in the hold and one which is likely to have its on the top deck?

Mr. Redfield need not be astonished if he finds that there is resentment here, aroused by the manner of his conduct and the process of his thought.

Editorial of the Day.

LIVING LANGUAGES.

(From the Indianapolis News.)

An article in the Philadelphia Ledger calls attention to our neglect of living languages in any scheme of our education, even in the colleges.
And what is more, it traces this indifference to our English inheritance—the Anglo-Saxon linguistic difference to any foreign tongue. The refusal of the English of Elizabeth's day to pronounce the name of the town of Ypres, where British troops have recently been fighting, gave us our word
"diaper." No Englishman would say "drap Ypres" (cloth of Ypres) in the French style of
"drap deeper," but in the English style of "dye-
per" cloth, then just "dye-per," and then diaper.
Many philosophers hold that it is this indifference to foreign tongues that has led to the present war. Just before the war England was losing her control of the world trade because Germany,
taking command of languages and knowledge of the peculiarities of peoples, instructed her youth in one or two and sometimes more languages.

We have inherited the Anglo-Saxon linguistic indifference, in spite of the many nationalities that have come to us. Our institutions of learning turn out many students unable to speak any language but their own. So all our efforts to capture South American trade are seriously hampered by our refusal to know either Spanish,
French or German, or all three.

With our economic relations with the West Indies, Central and South America, and Mexico,
a knowledge of Spanish and Portuguese is indicated as a necessity. But our colleges and universities, the article goes on to say, absolutely refuse to "reorganize" their modern language department, and send men forth equipped with a practical use of these languages.

Sir: "What do you read?" you asked recently.
The problem is sometimes difficult. A fellow traveler and I found ourselves in an out of the way place with three hours to wait for a train. Looking about the station, we found the following literature: A solid paper-backed volume entitled
"The Beautiful Quoque," a "fiction number" of a popular magazine, and a ford catalogue.
"What's your choice?" I asked my companion, offering him the lot. "I think," said he, starting for the door, "I will go out and throw rocks at telegraph poles."

AS A defense against the jokers the ford may have to rely on protective coloration.

Non Dieu! Bokos Problem.

(From "America and Her Problems," by Paul H. B. d'Estournelles de Constant.)

While I was lying almost at full length and being operated upon [in the Blackstone hotel barber shop] I kept one eye open so as to watch her.
She was fair, refined, and distinguished in appearance. She looked like the typical typewriter girl who ends by making a rich marriage. She sat beside a chair on which a young man of about 20
was reclining. Between her two white palms she held a hand he had abandoned to her ministrations.
She opened and closed it, manipulated it, and might almost be said to have made a plaything of it. But, as a matter of fact, she was not doing it for amusement, and was working the hand just as if she were modeling in wax. And what was the young man doing or saying while this angelic being leaned over him with his hand in hers? He was calmly holding his newspaper in the other hand and reading steadily. Here is something we shall never see in France, I thought.
In America it is perfectly natural, and it explains many things. Girls can do anything, and they finally exteriorize themselves and satisfy part of their natural instincts by devoting themselves to various forms of work, social activity, or physical exercise, and by degrees the calls of nature become less frequent and less imperative. . . . I do not know whether this can be described as happiness or as virtue, but it is a fact, and this fact plays a very important part in the life of the United States.

WILL THERE BE AN EPIDEMIC OF TYPHOID?

On July 24 the steamship Eastland turned turtle, throwing 2,600 people into the Chicago river. Of these about 1,100 were drowned,
and 1,400, after being in the water for a while, reached land. From the moment of the accident and for a while thereafter, large numbers went into the water in efforts to rescue.
Let us say, then, that 2,000 people were in the waters of the Chicago river and survived. The great majority of these swallowed water. The Eastland sank about half a mile from the mouth of the Chicago river. The current in the Chicago river flows upstream. Between the infected shore water and sewage that has emptied into the stream, the water
at the point of the Eastland disaster is considerably polluted.

People who are to develop typhoid fever from swallowing river water at the time of the accident will get sick between Aug. 3 and Aug. 7. The physicians should be able to make the diagnosis of typhoid fever during the week of Aug.
7 to Aug. 10.
Cases infected by these cases through such intermediary agencies as flies, in-gers, and milk should begin to appear about Sept. 1, and should continue to appear through September and October.

The question arises: Will there be 1,000 or more cases of typhoid as the result of this accident? The answer is:
No. The reasons for the answer are these:

The health department has the names and addresses of most of the people who were in the water. Physicians and nurses of the health department are at work vaccinating as many of these people as are willing to be vaccinated. Vaccination quickly done by the skin method
will make many of these people immune to typhoid. There is ample time for all of those brought in contact with the resued to make themselves immune through the vaccination given free by the department. The immunity lasts for three years.

However, this is not the only reason for the negative answer given the question. Some of those who swallowed river water are immune to typhoid; some have had the disease; some are naturally immune, and some were immune at the time of the disaster. It is necessary to avoid a good sized dose of bacilli to contract the disease; one swallow will not cause it. The probability is that most of those who swallowed river water got a small dose of typhoid, if they got any.

The conclusion is that we need not fear
a city-wide epidemic as the result of the disaster; but as the health department should be active, and those liable to the malady should be vaccinated.

NGATESTONE hall, in Essex, which is now being offered for sale by young Lord Petre, is familiar to most American novel readers through its being the scene of Miss Braddon's Secret.

Situated at a distance of twenty-five miles from London, it has been in the Petre family for just 320 years, having formed part of the church property consecrated by Henry VIII. and bestowed
by him upon his secretary, Sir William Petre. Sir William would not accept Ingatestone hall nor the Thor-ndon hall estate, in the same county, until he had had his possession thereof confirmed by a papal bull, a precaution which not only served to avert the blight which seems to have fallen upon many of the families that participated in the distribution of the confiscated property of the church, but likewise prevented any resurreptions on the part of Queen Mary when she restored the Roman Catholic faith
with its wife, formerly Lady Cecilia Rose.
Just before Christmas, 1914, the late Lord Petre, who was a Roman Catholic
and the brother's reigns to the stake
and to the scaffold.

Indeed, Queen Mary spent a week at Ingatestone hall as a guest of the Petres
in 1555 and was most hospitably entertained there. The late Lord Petre visited there several days in 1901.
The house is full of historic associations,
and the extensive fish ponds, the lovely
old gardens and the ancient yew hedges
date back to monastic days.

That Lord Petre should be selling the place can only be ascribed to the fact that he has two other country seats,
that, like other peers and territorial magnates, he foresees that the taxation at the end of the war will fall more heavily upon land than upon any other class of property, and that he is anxious to diminish his territorial holdings.

Lord Petre, who is now in the front of a twenty-year-old subaltern in the Coldstream guards, is the sixteenth peer of his line and has a strain of American blood in his veins. His widowed mother is a daughter of the late George Cavendish Taylor of New York.
Her married life was very unhappy. In fact, her husband, the late baron, was obliged to expatriate himself for many years, owing to his involving himself in all sorts of painful scandals, which eventually landed him in prison, and, after spending several years in hiding upon an assumed name on this side of the Atlantic, he died, still under an assumed name and under somewhat mysterious circumstances, in a cheap lodging house
in London.

So anxious was his elder brother and predecessor in the family honors and estates to prevent their passing into the hands that, though regarded as a confirmed bachelor, he married in 1880 the daughter of the Rev. William R. Clark of Trinity college, Toronto.
Greatly to his disappointment, no son
was born of the union, only a daughter,
now fifteen years of age, and who is a peeress in her own right, the ancient barony of Furnival, created in 1296 and in abeyance for many centuries, having been revived in her favor in 1913.

Young Lady Furnival lives with her widowed Canadian-born mother, Audrey, Lady Petre, at Hollenden park, Hildenham, in Kent. Her perage will descend to her eldest son, or failing male issue, to her daughter, at her death, but will not be shared in any sense by her husband.

Lord Petre, unlike his young cousin,
Lady Furnival, is a Roman Catholic, and a number of the Petres have been and are in holy orders. Thus, the Hon. Margaret, the Hon. Teresa, and the Hon.
Mary Petre, all of them aunts of the late Lord Petre, were nuns, while one of his uncles, the thirteenth baron, was a Roman Catholic prelate as well as a member of the household of Philip IX., and enjoyed the distinction of having been the only Roman Catholic priest who sat in the house of lords since the days of the reformation.

Sir Cyril Rose, who has just passed away at Farnham, in Surrey, was the third baronet of his line, and like Lord Petre, had a strain of American blood in his veins. His grandmother, wife of the first baronet, old Sir John Rose, was the daughter of Robert Emmet Temple of Rutland, Vt., and a celebrated beauty in her day.

Sir John was a partner of Levi P. Morgan in the Anglo-American banking house of Morgan, Rose & Co., and after being minister of finance in Canada and high commissioner of the dominion in London, joined the household of King Edward, when Prince of Wales, as a member of the council of the duchy of Cornwall and as the heir apparent's principal financial adviser.

Sir John Rose left several sons, one of whom, Capt. Edward Rose, formerly spent considerable time in the United States
with his wife, formerly Lady Cecilia Rose.
While over here they were well known figures in New York society.

Another son was the late Sir Charles Rose of the Jockey club and of the Royal Yacht squadron, who was a successful breeder of race horses, and was for many years the racing partner of King Edward when Prince of Wales. He was the president of the Royal Automobile club of England, and died suddenly while out motoring, passing away so quietly
that his chauffeur, who was in the front seat of the open car, did not notice that he was dead until he had driven him half way through London.

Sir Charles had four sons, all of whom lost their lives in the Boer war, where the third son, the third son, Capt.
Adrian Rose, died shortly before the present war, and after only three months of marriage, while Sir Frank Rose, the last of the four and the successor to his father's title, was killed in action in France
just before Christmas, 1914.

Sir Frank left a little boy to inherit his own baronetcy, while his cousin, Sir Cyril, who has just died, also had a youngster of six to inherit his title and estates.

Memories of the role played by Scottish soldiers of fortune in the eighteenth century history of Russia were recalled in England the other day by the suit brought
for divorce in London by Princess Carina
Baciulea, a Russian, against Charles Louis
Victor Ottoly.

The husband, an English subject and a native of England, is the son of an Italian who espoused the cause of Garibaldi
sixty years ago and, compelled to flee
from Italy, settled down in England.

The princess, a Russian, who obtained
her divorce without any difficulty, is a granddaughter of old Gen. Prince Barclay de Tolly, who was a favorite member of the household, first of Czar Nicholas I.
and then of his son and successor, Alexander II.

MISS KAISER GAINST TITLE IN CITY GOLF

Flossmoor Player Defeats Miss Ruth Layman in Finals, 5 and 3.

BY J. G. DAVIS.

Miss Laurie Kaiser of the Flossmoor Country club scored a comparatively easy victory in the deciding match for the women's Chicago golf championship, defeating Miss Ruth Layman of Skokie, 5 and 3, at the Exmoor Country club.

After her defeat of Mrs. Colburn in the semi-finals on Thursday it was expected Miss Layman would give the south side representative a close run, and this did not prove a bad guess for the first nine holes. Up to the turn each had a medal card of 48 and Miss Kaiser was leading 1 up, but from that point on Miss Layman was able to halve only two holes, the other four going to her opponent.

Slow Course Only Drawback.
For the first time during the tournament weather conditions were fairly good, the slow course being the only drawback. Miss Kaiser won the first hole, 4 and 3, 6-7, Miss Layman doubling her drive and being short of the green on her fourth. At the long second, 450 yards, Miss Kaiser was home in three and down in two putts. Miss Layman getting into the rough and taking two to get out. Miss Kaiser won 6-6, and was 2 up.

The Flossmoor player was bunkered at the third and pitched out short of the green. Miss Layman winning a perfect four, men's par. Another par five at the fifth hole, 405 yards, gave Miss Layman the hole, 5-7, and squared the match. Three poor shots cost Miss Layman the sixth hole, but the Flossmoor girl played the short seventh poorly and lost, 6-4, again squaring.

Miss Kaiser 1 Up at Turn.
The Skokie player lost the eighth hole by putting her third shot out of bounds. They halved the ninth hole in four, leaving Miss Kaiser 1 up.

The feature of the incoming round was a fine three at the twelfth hole, 235 yards, by Miss Kaiser. She got a long drive, and then put her second ten feet from the pin and sunk the putt. At the short water hole Miss Layman drove into the pond and lost, 6-3. Three putts cost her the fifteenth hole, where the match ended.

Brand Wins Feature Match.
Dr. Lee K. Stewart and Walter Egan were numbered among the missing after the first round, which left a fairly tight field for the second round. The best match was the nineteenth hole affair, in which Brand eliminated Louis P. Hopkins, former south-west champion of Chicago, at the nineteenth green.

Brand outplayed Hopkins in the first round. The Skokie player was 1 up at the third hole, but Brand won the next four, 2-4, being 1 down at the turn and having a medal score of 48. Mrs. Heening won all the even holes coming in and Miss Ellis all the odd. Mrs. Heening was down 1 at the first low net, but she was 5-6, Summary of other flights:

Third night—Mrs. J. Worley, Hinsdale, defeated Mrs. E. T. Jones, View 2, 2 up.
Fourth night—Mrs. E. T. Jones, View 2, 2 up.
Fifth night—Mrs. E. T. Jones, View 2, 2 up.
Sixth night—Mrs. E. T. Jones, View 2, 2 up.

Sawyer in Mixed Foursome.
Mrs. A. A. Sawyer and D. E. Sawyer, both of the Wheaton Golf club, won the mixed foursome in the afternoon with a card of 81-5-76, which was both low net and gross. On the slow course it was a fine performance. They took the low gross prize in the first low net event to Miss Marjorie Edwards and Donald Edwards of Midlothian with a card of 80-45-81. Second low net went to Mrs. R. S. Dutton and Elliott Evans of Evanston with 80-45-81, so far as Elliott was ahead of his former partner, Fortney, who completed. Other leading scores were:

G. N. C. P. O. and Mr. Miller, Chest Development Important.

says Antoinette Donnelly

TO be consistent with good health the least chest development of an adult woman is twenty-eight inches, and the underarm girth must be enlarged three inches on forced inspiration. The proper relation between the height, weight, and chest measurement is as follows:

Height	Weight	Chest
5.0	120	32.00
5.1	125	32.50
5.2	130	33.00
5.3	135	33.50
5.4	140	34.00

If your chest is narrow practice deep breathing every day. Do it as religiously as you eat your meals and your health and looks will be improved wonderfully. Swimming comes second in order of importance as a means of developing your chest. And the following exercises, if practiced every day for a couple of months, will work wonders in increasing the chest and strengthening the muscles of respiration. These movements also relieve the engorged veins of fatigued legs.

First position: Stand erect with heels together and hands resting on your hips. Straighten out the right arm and extend it perpendicularly up at the side of the head and at the same time carry the left leg outward and upward as far as possible. Then lower the leg and arm, returning to original position.

Second position: Stand erect with heels together and hands resting on your hips, as in the first position. Then take the same movements with the left arm and right leg as were taken in the first position. The arm and leg should be raised and lowered simultaneously.

Antoinette Donnelly's Answers.
MABLE: Keratosis is excellent for helping the growth of the hair, but its odor is so strong it is disagreeable to use. A hair tonic would be much easier to apply and would not leave a disagreeable odor. It should be glad to send you my formula for a good hair tonic if you wish it, also instructions for scalp massage. If you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope.

MRS. ANNA H.: There are two varieties of corns—hard and soft. Hard corns must be cut down with the right tool. They should be cut directly after the bath when the skin is supple. A small pointed pencil should be used after being sterilized by boiling for five minutes. After your corn has been cut apply the following:

MARION HARLAND'S HELPING HAND

Received Many Needed Things.
"SOME time ago I wrote to you and asked you for some bedding. Mrs. L. J. M. gave me some and many other things I needed. I am very thankful. She sent a woman to me brought a basket and remembered my children with clothing and toys. I gave her a go-cart and asked to dispose of, as we have no longer any need of them. I am sure she will find some mother who can use them.

Mrs. M. is a "starred name" upon our books, and the memory of her acts of love and mercy are fragrant in the minds of the many to whom she is ministering angel. Nothing you can tell us of her benefactions can surprise us. Right thankful am I that you could let her have the baby carriages for her pensioners. It was a gracious acknowledgment of your spiritual kinship with her.

Finding Homes for Unfortunates.
"I have placed four of the six children of whom I wrote to you, in splendid Christian homes. I thought you would be pleased to hear this. I am still seeking homes for the two left, one a girl of 16, who is in a boarding school, and a boy two years older, who is also in school. The children are not exactly dependent. At their father's death they will have a small income. It is a sad story. I gain give you the best of references as to my respectability and right to place the children according to my judgment. They are under my care and could be legally adopted. Although they are over age at which adoptions are usually made, they would be willing to be thus settled. Can you send me addresses that would enable me to arrange matters satisfactorily? It is a great responsibility, but I cannot escape it. Mrs. R. H. W."

We have sent to this good woman, sorely burdened by the misfortune of others, two addresses which may be of signal service to her. It is no common perplexity which weighs upon her, and if the corner can aid in her pious undertaking we are grateful for the opportunity.

Offers Truss and Stamps.
"My husband has a truss for the left side is good condition which will be pleased to pass on to any one in need of it. Kindly send me the name of Edna E., who wishes foreign stamps. I have been collecting for several years and have duplicates of many kinds that might help her out. The H. M. C. is doing good deeds. I hope its banner for kindness may long continue to wave.

"Mrs. I. E. A."

Will you hold the truss until we can place it? You are considerate to tell us for which side it is intended. It will soon be called for, I am sure. As I have said, and said—my cannot have too many such helps to the stricken members of our family. Each is caught out of our hands as soon as it is advertised in the Corner. The same may be affirmed of the stamp your husband tendered. Thank him heartily for thinking of us.

Something for Two.
"Thank you for your kindness in sending me the address of Mrs. L. E. B.; also of Y. M. B. I've written to the former and sent what I had for the latter. M. B."

"The little milliner" has been affectionately remembered by so many that her stock must be creditably replenished by now. Let us hope it will be again pulled down by a run of custom. She must notify us how things are going with her.

To Make Quilt.
"I see that Mrs. W. P. H. has silk pieces to give away. I should like very much to have them. I received some a while ago, which I made good use of, for I finished one slumber robe and sold it, and have commenced another. I should be thankful for pieces to make quilts. I am 88 years old, and not able to do much else. Please remember me in your Corner. M. J. N. S."

It is a disappointment to me, as it will, I fear, be to you, to learn that the pieces upon which you had set your heart were given away a week ago or more. We must try to gather up some hundreds for the future. It would be a shame were that second slumber robe to remain incomplete. The Corner disapproves heartily of half way measures.

FLICKERINGS from FILM LAND

MISS LILLIAN GISH

Eastland Benefits for Old and Young.

TWO stirring benefit events occupy the attention of Saturday morning in pictureland. There is the big affair at the Illinois, where "The Birth of a Nation," filmland's sensation, unfolds at 10:30 for the Tamm-Eastland fund. Besides the picture, the star of it, Henry Walthall, is going to shine in person as well as celluloid.

But folks have to be 21 to be able to go there, and over at Orchestra hall is a place for the folks not of age. The Strand's regular morning matinee for little folks is turned into an Eastland benefit, where happy children may help those who are unhappy. It's a joy promising program, what with "The Sleeping Beauty," a bird picture, and one about a runaway leopard, and besides, Margot, a little classic dancer, and Harry Pullan Ayres, a young violinist, will perform. The party begins at 10 o'clock.

Today has only one picture change. "The Puppet Crown" at the Ziegfeld is succeeded by "Silver Threads," a fitting Gold production, containing Richard J. Ross as the hero. The further announcement is that Mr. Ross will also appear in person at every performance of the picture and at appropriate times.

Fashions from London

Little girl's three piece costume consisting of coat and plaited skirt in rose colored linen and sheer blouse in white organdy.

LONDON.—(Special Correspondence.)—Little girls' styles, while presenting some aspects of adult fashions, still retain an individuality all their own. Some of the novelties in a coat and skirt costume for the little maid. Hitherto this idea has been voted too grown up for juvenile wear, and it has been only in the case of a sailor dress that had a refter coat to match that the small girl betook herself to the tailor made styles.

The charming little suit depicted is fashioned of a rose color suit of rather a heavy weight. The design, however, is one that will work out well in serge or gabardine or any of the small plaids that are expected to be so much used when the cooler days of autumn come.

The plaited skirt is mounted on a belt, to which bretelles, or suspenders, are attached, these holding the skirt over the shoulders. A sheer blouse of white organdy, with ruffles of narrow, creamy valenciennes, is a part of the design. The coat is of the "little girl" style, while the undergarment seems making for a fitting. A white linen belt is passed through slashes, these bound with a bias band of the rose linen.

The other little dress is of a plain white pique, with the full blouse top done in a sheer white voile. Shirrings are used on blouse and skirt to adjust the fullness, both blouse and skirt fastening in the back. The crossed suspenders have pearl buttons and worked eyelets for a finish. Instead of the usual plain hem there is a narrow white band of the pique, with the well running horizontally, applied on the lower edge of the skirt.

The Showy Mallows.

THE hibiscus and marshmallows should be found in all grounds of any extent. The foliage is luxuriant and decorative, the flowers of delicate coloring blooming without cessation from July until frost.

The mallow marvels are a robust type standing very erect. They produce a great number of enormous flowers in the richest shades of crimson, pink and white. The swamp rose mallow, also a hardy perennial, has flowers not less than six inches in diameter, of a light, rosy red with a darker eye.

The crimson-eye, yet another type, has even larger blooms like great single hot-bells of the purest white, with a spot of deep velvety crimson in the center. The Golden Bowl is a superb variety. The effect of these plants abloom in July against masses of shrubbery is most charming.

The new giant-flowering marshmallow has gone beyond all expectations. Coming from sturdy native stock, they are willing to adapt themselves to gardens in almost any situation. In a suburban estate there are masses in the low ground with flowers twelve inches across, in red, pink and white, and on the drier upper grounds other plantations equally flourishing, but with intensified colors.

The annual mallow from seed sown in May is a small reproduction of its giant relatives. It is a showy little plant decorating itself with more flowers than leaves. The most popular sort boasts of a grand name, trimmer's grandiorosa. It grows but two feet high and its flowers are a lovely shrimp pink.

BRIGHT SAYINGS of CHILDREN

"The Tribune" will pay $1 for each childish saying printed. The stories may be sent in either by children or their parents. Tommy owned a little dog. A little friend told him he would give him 10 cents for it. Walking along, they met another small boy who, on being told of the prospective sale, sized up the puppy and, after a critical study, remarked: "See here, Tommy—that's too nice a little dog to sell for 10 cents. I'll give you 15 for it."

I always tuck my small son in before 8 o'clock sharp. But one night, however, I lingered and Dan grew sleepy. As he deposited the guest's hat at his side, he said: "Mamma, I tried to sleep in my bed, when Dan came into the room, I put me to bed, and it is long over my time." Of course, I can only guess Jack got the guest's hat.

We have a handsome peacock that is an unfailing source of interest to our juvenile neighbors. A few days ago 8 year old Billy saw it for the first time, and just while he stood admiring it the peacock spread its gorgeous tail and began to strut. "O, lookee, lookee, mamma!" cried the little fellow, excitedly, "he's a-bloomin', he's a-bloomin'!" P. S. C.

In your trip West do not fail to visit the "Wonder Mountain," Rainier, the "silent sentinel of Puget Sound."

In reviewing the prominent mountain summits of America, the United States Geological Survey says: "Easily King of All is Rainier"—many world travelers go farther and affirm that for grandeur and beauty, no mountain in any country is its equal in number and variety of appealing charms.

There is a comfortable home-like Inn, also a number of tent hotels, trails and bridle paths lead from the Inn in all directions. A splendid government road enables you to motor right up to the nose of one of the big glaciers.

Rainier is the most accessible mountain in America—trains of the Tacoma Eastern branch of the Northern Pacific connect at Ashford with auto stages that take you right into the midst of this mountain parkland.

REALTY TAX UP TO $2,604,929,907; PROTESTS BEGIN

General Increase of Chicago Assessments Results in Volume of Complaints.

Real estate in Cook county has a total tax valuation of $2,604,929,907, according to assessment figures completed yesterday by the board of assessors. In the report it was shown that the realty in the city alone has a valuation of $2,423,000,631, while that in the county outside of Chicago is $179,929,276.

The figures for the entire county show an increase of $29,455,611, or 12.04 per cent, over the valuation placed on real estate last year by the board of review. If the assessors' figures are not changed, one-third of the total valuation, or $808,800,960, will be used in levying taxes.

In almost every section of the city values were increased.

Increases All Over City.
In many districts the assessment based on one-third value was raised more than 400 per cent. In other districts the increase ranged from 60 to 120 per cent. Following the assessors' estimate of the sudden jump in values, real estate dealers and property owners prepared to make a general protest to the board of review. The most vigorous will be by property owners along Lake Shore Drive, where the assessment of last year has been quadrupled.

In manufacturing districts the valuation has been increased 60 and 90 per cent. In some instances the assessors estimated a decrease, but these cases are few. The general rise caused the board of review to prepare for the hardest session in its history.

Protest on Shore Drive.
One of the first organized protests will be made by the Lake Shore Drive Improvement association, headed by A. C. Honore and Stuart G. Shepard. The association represents the district east of the drive between Pearson street and Lincoln parkway. According to Mr. Shepard, the assessors' estimate for the whole district was made upon the valuation of a small number of improved property lots.

"Very little of the property in that district is improved," Mr. Shepard said. "The assessors valued the whole district upon the estimate of the improved property. Some of the really has been increased 400 per cent. This is unfair because the property values have not increased that much in years. The excessive taxation of property to swell tax receipts will actually do harm and prevent contemplated improvements."

Improvement associations in Rogers Park and the far northwest side are also planning to see the board of review. Several organizations have been sending postcards to property owners urging them to lodge a complaint with the board.

Assessors Defend Action.
William H. Weber of the assessors' board gave plentiful reasons.

"We increased the tax valuation because the property values have increased," he said. "I defy one property owner to show that his property is worth less than the value we place upon it. The way to find that out is to go to some of them and offer to buy their property."

"The taxation this year is made upon the regular quadrennial valuation. Every four years we wipe out all previous assessments and go out to make entirely new valuations, independent of the last year's records. The last quadrennial assessment was made in 1911. Many property owners secured a reduction from the board of review. This year we ignored those reductions and placed new valuations. The property owners figure the sudden jump is only on last year, but they should remember the increases figure back four years."

Adam Wolf, another member of the board of assessors, said: "We are willing to listen to all complaints, but barring clerical or technical errors I will bet $100 to a dime there is not a piece of property in Chicago that is not assessed at least 5 per cent under its actual value."

"In 98 cases out of 100 the property is assessed 10 per cent under. In thousands of cases property owners are assessed 50 per cent under the actual valuation, and yet in most of these cases they try to have it reduced. We keep a record of all sales and we can show what every piece of property cost. Men who pay $200,000 for a piece of property attempt to get us to value it at $25,000 or even lower. Now that is unreasonable."

The tax law provides for assessments on one-third basis.

WHO WILL THROW OUT THE LIFE LINE HERE?

That the present weather is in many respects worse for sick mothers and ailing babies than if it were hot and sunny is pointed out yesterday by B. C. Roloff, in charge of summer out-camp for the United Charities, who wrote praising those who have contributed to this Tribune's Algonquin hospital and ice funds. He pointed out that milk cools more easily now than in hot weather when there is not so much moisture.

With his letter comes an appeal for a sick child struggling for life at the Presbyterian hospital. He is John Blomgren, 16 months old, who has undergone two operations. His physician says that continued care for about a month is essential for his recovery. An appeal was made to Mrs. Laura Collier of this Tribune's hospital, who replied that lack of help makes it impossible to receive the child there for so long a time. There are only four nurses for 300 persons.

"If any Tribune reader cares to give $25," Mrs. Collier writes, "I will hire a nurse and see if we can save him. I would lodge a complaint with the board. The most noticeable increase occurred with corner lots. Where inside lots were increased 50 per cent, corner lots were jumped 80 per cent."

An organized complaint was made yesterday by manufacturers along the Chicago river, between Thirty-fifth and Thirty-ninth streets. They oppose the increase on the grounds that business is bad and that they are not getting adequate returns on even the old valuation. The river, they say, is an expense, because the wharves must be kept up, although the river is not used.

In many residential localities property owners oppose the increase because streets are not made, and that improvements are not likely for four or five years. All of these objections were presented to both the assessors and the board of review. Members of the board of review did not appear enthusiastic about the work confronting them. Asked what reasons they thought the board of assessors had in making the increases, one member said: "Heaven knows, I don't."

FIRST SUIT TO CONFISCATE 'IMMORAL PROPERTY' BEGUN.

New Injunction and Abatement Law Invoked in Case of Minnie Steel of 2127 South State Street.

The first prosecution started under the new injunction and abatement law, which provides that premises used for immoral purposes may be closed with the state seal on the doors for one year, and that the furniture may be confiscated and sold by the state, was brought before Judge Hoag in the morals court yesterday.

The defendant is Minnie Steel, who was charged with conducting a disorderly house at 2127 South State Street. The property is said to be owned by Mrs. Elizabeth P. Smith of 4124 Grand boulevard. It is charged by the police that she rented the Steel woman that children watched from the windows at the State street house to warn the inmates of the approach of officers. A jury trial was asked for by the Steel woman. This was granted and set for Aug. 4 before Judge Mahoney.

WHEAT RALLIES AFTER SETBACK

Mart Becomes Oversold; Wet Weather Factor; July Oats Score Gain.

Following a little rally early, wheat prices were forced sharply lower, when commission houses took the surplus off the market, and prices rallied again when shorts tried to cover. The market closed to 50¢ higher. Cables were relatively steady and with some recovery of the winter wheat belt and more predicted, there was uneasiness among the shorts to start with. Later there was more confidence in the selling side as the result of optimistic reports from the northwest.

Snow was with a special report saying his reports from the spring wheat country indicated the crop was maturing ahead of the black rust, as the wheat where rust was first discovered has been harvested with no damage. Most of the other reports were of a bearish tenor and there was not much fear of black rust developments, the Minneapolis market being especially heavy.

Country Offerings Light.

Offerings of wheat from the country continue light, but other than the eagerness is displayed by foreign buyers and for the season and with the probable surplus we have in sight to dispose of the buying demand is disappointing. Foreign reports indicate that the continental countries will be good buyers of wheat, and when stocks accumulate here business doubtless will be on a larger scale. It is estimated that France alone will have to import 100,000,000 bu.

Russian prices were lowered, due to inability to ship the wheat out of the country. Argentine shipments for the week were 170,000 bu. and Indian shipments were 1,244,000 bu. From this country and Canada clearances for the week were 2,880,000 bu. against 2,800,000 bu. a year ago. Liverpool was 14¢ higher to 10¢ lower. English currency are strong.

More Showers Predicted.

The weather predictions were not at all encouraging, being for general showers over the highest part of the forecast district. Heavy rains were reported all through Kansas, Nebraska, and Missouri. Threshing is being greatly delayed. Receipts were 202 cars here yesterday and primary arrivals were 1,445, 290 bu. against 1,007 cars and 1,000,000 bu. for the week. Southwest millers report less than the usual amount of business booked, both domestic and export.

Northwest Receipts Were 231 Cars; Last Year, 164 Cars.

Winnipeg cars were 72, against 144 cars a year ago. Clearances for the day were 354,000 bu. foreign reports were of a generally slow demand, although there were reports of 400,000 bu. reported at the seaboard and 400,000 bu. here.

Corn Has Firm Undertone.

Corn was in moderate demand, but there was no great pressure, and the market took its cue throughout the day from wheat. The close was unchanged to 1¢ higher. Cables were steady, and this, with the unsettled weather over the market a firm start. Commission houses were good buyers on the break. Cash prices were a little lower, and there were sales of 120,000 bu.

Argentine Corn Offered at the Seaboard at 75¢/75¢.

Argentine corn was offered at the seaboard at 75¢/75¢. Argentine weather is favorable and the corn is grading well. Shipments for the week were 5,047,000 bu. against 5,201,000 bu. a year ago. Receipts were 188 cars here, and primary receipts were 1,445, 290 bu. against 1,007 cars and 1,000,000 bu. for the week. Crop reports generally were a little more favorable.

July Oats Make New High.

The trade in July was the feature of the oats market, and there was free trading by shorts, which lifted the market at one time to 36¢, and the close was 67¢/67¢. Cables were higher, and the movement, the prices attained being the highest of the movement. The deferred months were strong as the result of the continued unfavorable weather, and prices were 64¢/64¢ to 65¢ higher.

Small Changes in Products.

Prices for products were but little changed at the close. Following a little rally early there was fair buying and prices rallied, the advance being met by selling credited to packers and to the buyers of the previous day. Logan Bran were good buyers of land early.

The cash trade is not broadening a great deal as yet, but the fact that prices are the lowest in a long time is bringing some buying here and there and is regarded as selling too low, relatively. Hog receipts were 21,000 with 10,000 for today and western receipts were 50,000, compared to 57,000 a year ago. Prices at the yards were steady to 10¢ up.

Eye Market Weak.

Rye ruled quiet with sales of No. 3 at $1.00 and No. 4 at 95¢/95¢. No. 2 closed $1.02 bid. Receipts, 0 cars.

Barley was quiet with sales of malting at 74¢/74¢. Receipts, 10 cars.

Timothy was quiet. September closed $7.00 bid and $7.10 asked. Country lots, $4.75 to $5.00 nominal. Cloverseed was unchanged with country lots, $5.50 to $5.75 nominal.
